UJ CONSORTIUM CABLE NAMING CONVENTION

For reasons of clarity and consistency, the UJ Consortium's naming convention for some cable types may vary from that of the manufacturer. The following are examples where the UJ Consortium's naming convention has been applied to particular cable types:

- Square brackets have been used to include an older reference that is no longer current, for example NSW MINISUB [CT]
- Cable with the same name but with different fiber tube diameter would have the fiber tube outside diameter in brackets after the cable type name, for example Hexatronic GJLMTV (3.7) and Hexatronic GJLMTV (5.6).
- Armor cables can be differentiated where they are in the same cable type but are not differentiated by the terms SAL, SA, SAH, etc. with the armor wire diameter in brackets after the cable variant, for example NEXANS URC-1 SA(2.4) and NEXANS URC-1 DA(3.6/3.6).

If you have any doubt as to the identification or the name of a particular cable type, please contact your UJC supplier for advice.

If you have any queries concerning this information, please contact the UJ Consortium Co-ordinator.
